THE LIFE OF
THOMAS GRAY.

THOMAS GRAY was born in Cornhill, in the city of London, on the 26th of December, 1716. His father, Philip Gray, was a money-scrivener; but being of an indolent and profuse disposition, he rather diminished than improved his paternal fortune. Our Author received his classical education at Eton school, under Mr. Antrobus, his mother's brother, a man of sound learning and refined taste, who directed his nephew to those pursuits which laid the foundation of his future literary fame.

During his continuance at Eton, he contracted a friendship with Mr. Horace Walpole, well known for his knowledge in the fine arts; and Mr. Richard West, son of the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, a youth of very promising talents.

When he left Eton school in 1734, he went to Cambridge, and entered a pensioner at Peterhouse, at the recommendation of his uncle Antrobus, who had been a fellow of that college. It is said that, from his effeminacy and fair complexion, he acquired, among his fellow students, the appellation of Miss Gray, to which the delicacy of his manners seems not a little to have contributed. Mr. Walpole was at that time a fellow-commoner of King's College, in the same University; a fortunate circumstance, which afforded Gray frequent opportunities of intercourse with his Honourable Friend.

Mr. West went from Eton to Christ Church, Oxford; and in this state of separation, these two votaries of the Muses, whose dispositions were congenial, commenced an epistolary correspondence, part of which is published by Mr. Mason, a gentleman whose character stands high in the republic of letters.

Gray, having imbibed a taste for poetry, did not relish those abstruse studies which generally occupy the minds of students at College; and therefore, as he found very little gratification from academical pursuits, he left Cambridge in 1738, and returned to London, intending to apply himself to the study of the law: but this intention was soon laid aside, upon an invitation given him by Mr. Walpole, to accompany him in his travels abroad; a situation highly preferable, in Gray's opinion, to the dry study of the law.

They set out together for France, and visited most of the places worthy of notice in that country: from thence they proceeded to Italy, where an unfortunate dispute taking place between them, a separation ensued upon their arrival at Florence. Mr. Walpole afterwards, with great candour and liberality, took upon himself the blame of the quarrel; though, if we consider the matter coolly and impartially, we may be induced to conclude that Gray, from a conscious superiority of ability, might have claimed a deference to his opinion and judgment, which his Honourable Friend was not at that time disposed to admit: the rupture, however, was very unpleasant to both parties.

Gray pursued his journey to Venice on an economic plan, suitable to the circumscribed state of his finances; and having continued there some weeks, returned to England in September, 1741. He appears, from his letters, published by Mr. Mason, to have paid the minutest attention to every object worthy of notice throughout the course of his travels. His descriptions are lively and picturesque, and bear particular marks of his genius and disposition. We admire the sublimity of his ideas when he ascends the stupendous heights of the Alps, and are charmed with his display of nature, decked in all the beauties of vegetation. Indeed, abundant information, as well as entertainment, may be derived from his casual letters.

In about two months after his arrival in England, he lost his father, who, by an indiscreet profusion, had so impaired his fortune, as not to admit of his son's prosecuting the study of the law with that degree of respectability which the nature of the profession requires, without becoming burthensome to his mother and aunt. To obviate, therefore, their importunities on the subject, he went to Cambridge, and took his bachelor's degree in civil law.

But the inconveniencies and distress attached to a scanty fortune were not the only ills our Poet had to encounter at this time: he had not only lost the friendship of Mr. Walpole abroad, but poor West, the partner of his heart, fell a victim to complicated maladies, brought on by family misfortunes, on the 1st of June, 1742, at Popes, a village, in Hertfordshire, where he went for the benefit of the air.

The excessive degree in which his mind was agitated for the loss of his friend, will best appear from the following beautiful little sonnet:

“ In vain to me the smiling mornings shine,
 “ And redd’ning Pæbus lifts his golden fire:
 “ The birds in vain their am’rous descant join,
 “ Or cheerful fields resume their green attire:
 “ These ears, alas! for other notes repine;
 “ A different object do these eyes require;
 “ My lonely anguish melts no heart but mine,
 “ And in my breast th’ imperfect joys expire;
 “ Yet morning smiles the busy race to cheer,
 “ And new-born pleasure brings to happier men;
 “ The fields to all their wonted tribute bear;
 “ To warn their little loves the birds complain:
 “ I fruitless mourn to him that cannot hear;
 “ And weep the more, because I weep in vain.”

Mr. Gray now seems to have applied his mind very sedulously to poetical composition: his Ode to Spring was written early in June, to his friend Mr. West, before he received the melancholy news of his death: how our Poet's susceptible mind was affected by that melancholy incident, is evidently demonstrated by the lines quoted above; the impression, indeed, appears to have been too deep to be soon effaced; and the tenour of the subjects which called for the exertions of his poetical talents subsequent to the production of this Ode, corroborates that observation; these were his Prospect of Eton, and his Ode to Adversity. It is also supposed, and with great probability, that he began his Elegy in a Country Church Yard about the same time. He passed some weeks at Stoke, near Windsor, where his mother and aunt resided, and in that pleasing retirement finished several of his most celebrated Poems.

VIII. LIFE OF GRAY.

From thence he returned to Cambridge, which, from this period, was his chief residence during the remainder of his life. The conveniencies with which a college life was attended, to a person of his narrow fortune, and studious turn of mind, were more than a compensation for the dislike which, for several reasons, he bore to the place: but he was perfectly reconciled to his situation, on Mr. Mason's being elected a fellow of Pembroke-Hall; a circumstance which brought him a companion, who, during life, retained for him the highest degree of friendship and esteem.

In 1742 he was admitted to the degree of Bachelor in the Civil Law, as appears from a letter written to his particular friend Dr. Wharton, of Old Park, near Durham, formerly fellow of Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, in which he ridicules, with much point and humour, the follies and foibles, and the dullness and formality, which prevailed in the University.

In order to enrich his mind with the ideas of others, he devoted a considerable portion of his time to the study of the best Greek authors; so that, in the course of six years, there were hardly any writers of eminence in that language whose works he had not only read, but thoroughly digested.

His attention, however, to the Greek classics, did not wholly engross his time; for he found leisure to advert, in a new farcaſtical manner, to the ignorance and dullneſs with which he was ſurrounded, though ſituated in the centre of learning. There is only a fragment remaining of what he had written on this ſubject, from which it may be inferred, that it was intended as an Hymn to Ignorance. The fragment is wholly introductory; yet many of the lines are ſo pointed in ſignification, and harmonious in verification, that they will be admitted, by the admirers of verſe, to diſplay his poetical talents with more brilliancy than appears in many of his lyric productions.

Hail, horrors, hail! ye ever gloomy bowers,
 Ye Gothic fanes, and antiquated towers!
 Where ruſhy Camus' ſlowly-winding flood
 Perpetual draws his humid train of mud:
 Glad I re-visit thy neglected reign:
 Oh, take me to thy peaceful ſhade again:
 But chiefly thee, whoſe influence, breath'd from high,
 Augments the native darkneſs of the ſky.
 Ah, Ignorance! ſoft, ſalutary power!
 Proſtrate with filial reverence I adore.
 Thrice hath Hyperion roll'd his annual race,
 Since weeping I forſook thy fond embrace.
 Oh, ſay, ſucceſſful doſt thou ſtill oppoſe,
 Thy leaden Ægis 'gainſt our ancient foes?
 Still ſtretch, tenacious of thy right divine,
 The maſſy ſceptre o'er thy ſlumbering line?
 And dewſ Lethean through the land diſpenſe,
 To ſteep in ſlumbers each benighted ſenſe?
 If any ſpark of wit's deluſive ray
 Break out, and ſaſh a momentary day,
 With damp, cold touch forbid it to aſpire,
 And huddle up in fogs the dangerous fire.
 Oh, ſay-----She hears me not, but, careleſs grown,
 Lethargic nods upon her ebon throne.
 Goddeſs! awake, ariſe; alas! my fears;
 Can powers immortal feel the force of years?
 Not thus of old, with enſigns wide unfurl'd,
 She rode triumphant o'er the vanquiſh'd world:
 Fierce nations own'd her unreſiſted might;
 And all was ignorance, and all was night:
 Oh ſacred age! Oh times for ever loſt!
 (The ſchoolman's glory, and the churchman's boaſt,)
 For ever gone---yet ſtill to fancy new,
 Her rapid wings the tranſient ſcene purſue,
 And bring the buried ages back to view.
 High on her car, behold the grandam ride,
 Like old Sefoſtris with barbaric pride;
  a team of harneſs'd monarchs' bend

LIFE OF GRAY.
In 1744 he seems to have given up his attention to the Muses. Mr. Walpole, desirous of preserving what he had already written, as well as perpetuating the merit of their deceased friend, West, endeavoured to prevail with Gray, to whom he had previously become reconciled, to publish his own Poems, together with those of West; but Gray declined it, conceiving their productions united would not suffice to fill even a small volume.

In 1747 Gray became acquainted with Mr. Mason, then a scholar of St. John's College, and afterwards Fellow of Pembroke-Hall. Mr. Mason, who was a man of great learning and ingenuity, had written, the year before, his "Monody on the Death of Pope," and his "Il Bellicoso, and "Il Pacifico;" and Gray revised these pieces at the request of a friend. This laid the foundation of a friendship that terminated but with life: and Mr. Mason, after the death of Gray, testified his regard for him, by superintending the publication of his works.

The same year he wrote a little Ode on the Death of a favourite Cat of Mr. Walpole's, in which humour and instruction are happily blended: but the following year he produced an effort of much more importance; the Fragment of an Essay on the Alliance of Education and Government. Its tendency was to demonstrate the necessary concurrence of both to form great and useful Men. It opens with the two following similes. The exordium is rather uncommon; but he seems to have adopted it as a kind of clue to the subject he meant to pursue in the subsequent part of the Poem.

As sickly plants betray a niggard earth,
Whose barren bosom starves her gen'rous birth,
Nor genial warmth nor genial juice retains,
Their roots to feed and fill their verdant veins;
And as in climes, where Winter holds his reign,
The soil, tho' fertile, will not teem in vain,
Forbids her gems to swell, her shades to rise,
Nor trusts her blossoms to the churlish skies;
So draw mankind in vain the vital airs,
Unform'd, unfriended, by those kindly cares

That

That health and vigour to the soul impart,
 Spread the young thought, and warm the op'ning heart;
 So fond instruction on the growing pow'rs
 Of Nature idly lavishes her stores,
 If equal Justice, with unclouded face,
 Smile not indulgent on the rising race,
 And scatter with a free, tho' frugal hand,
 Light golden show'rs of plenty o'er the land :
 But Tyranny has fix'd her empire there,
 To check their tender hopes with chilling fear, }
 And blast the blooming promise of the year.

This spacious animated scene survey,
 From where the rolling orb, that gives the day,
 His sable sons with nearer course surrounds
 To either pole and life's remotest bounds;
 How rude soe'er th' exterior form we find,
 Howe'er opinion tinge the vary'd mind,
 Alike to all the kind impartial Heav'n
 The sparks of truth and happiness has given;
 With sense to feel, with mem'ry to retain,
 They follow pleasure and they fly from pain;
 Their judgment mends the plan their fancy draws,
 Th' event presages and explores the cause:
 The soft returns of gratitude they know,
 By fraud elude, by force repel, the foe;
 While mutual wishes mutual woes endear,
 The social smile and sympathetic tear.

Say, then, thro' ages by what fate confin'd
 To diff'rent climes seem diff'rent souls assign'd;
 Here measur'd laws and philosophic ease
 Fix and improve the polish'd arts of peace;
 There Industry and Gain their vigils keep,
 Command the winds and tame th' unwilling deep :
 Here force and hardy deeds of blood prevail,
 There languid Pleasure sighs in ev'ry gale.
 Oft' o'er the trembling nations from afar
 Has Scythia breath'd the living cloud of war;
 And where the deluge burst with sweepy sway,
 Their arms, their kings, their gods, were roll'd away :
 As oft' have issu'd, host impelling host,
 The blue-ey'd myriads from the Baltic coast;
 The prostrate South to the destroyer yields
 Her boasted titles and her golden fields:
 With grim delight the brood of Winter view
 A brighter day, and heav'ns of azure hue,
 Scent the new fragrance of the breathing rose,
 And quaff the pendent vintage as it grows.
 Proud of the yoke, and pliant to the rod,
 Why yet does Asia dread a monarch's nod,
 While European freedom still withstands
 Th' encroaching tide that drowns her less'ning lands,
 And sees far off, with an indignant groan,
 Her native plains and empires once her own?
 Can op'ner skies, and sons of fiercer flame,
 O'erpower the fire that animates our frame;
 As lamps, that shed at eve a cheerful ray,
 Fade and expire beneath the eye of day?

Need we the influence of the northern star
 To string our nerves and steel our hearts to war?
 And where the face of Nature laughs around,
 Must sick'ning Virtue fly the tainted ground?
 Unmanly thought! what seasons can controul,
 What fancy'd zone can circumscribe, the soul,
 Who, conscious of the source from whence she springs,
 By Reason's light, on Resolution's wings,
 Spite of her frail companion, dauntless goes
 O'er Lybia's deserts and thro' Zembla's snows?
 She bids each slumb'ring energy awake,
 Another touch another temper take,
 Suspends th' inferior laws that rule our clay;
 The stubborn elements confess her sway;
 Their little wants their low desires refine,
 And raise the mortal to a height divine.

Not but the human fabric from the birth
 Imbibes a flavour of its parent earth;
 As various tracts enforce a various toil,
 The manners speak the idiom of their soil.
 An iron race the mountain-cliffs maintain,
 Foes to the gentler genius of the plain;
 For where unweary'd sinews must be found
 With side-long plough to quell the flinty ground,
 To turn the torrent's swift-descending flood,
 To brave the savage rushing from the wood,
 What wonder if, to patient valour train'd,
 They guard with spirit what by strength they gain'd?
 And while their rocky ramparts round they see,
 The rough abode of Want and Liberty,
 (As lawless force from confidence will grow)
 Insult the plenty of the vales below?
 What wonder in the sultry climes, that spread
 Where Nile, redundant o'er his summer-bed,
 From his broad bosom life and verdure flings,
 And broods o'er Ægypt, with his wat'ry wings,
 If, with advent'rous oar and ready sail,
 The dusky people drive before the gale,
 Or on frail floats to neighbouring cities ride,
 That rise and glitter o'er the ambient tide?

* * * * *

It is much to be lamented that our Author did not finish what was so successfully begun, as the Fragment is deemed superior to every thing in the same style of writing which our language can boast.

In 1750 he put his finishing stroke to his Elegy written in a Country Church-yard, which was communicated first to his friend Mr. Walpole, and by him to many persons of rank and distinction. This beautiful production introduced the author to the favour of Lady Cobham, and gave occasion to a singular composition, sition, called, A Long Story; in which various effusions of wit and humour are very happily interspersed.

The Elegy having found its way into the "Magazine of Magazines," the Author wrote to Mr. Walpole, requesting he would put it into the hands of Mr. Doddsley, and order him to print it immediately, in order to rescue it from the disgrace it might have incurred by its appearance in a Magazine. The Elegy was the most popular of all our Author's productions; it ran through eleven editions, and was translated into Latin by Anstey and Roberts; and in the same year a version of it was published by Lloyd. Mr. Bentley, an eminent Artist of that time, wishing to decorate this elegant composition with every ornament of which it is so highly deserving, drew for it a set of designs, as he also did for the rest of Gray's productions, for which the artist was liberally repaid by the Author in some beautiful Stanzas, but unfortunately no perfect copy of them remains. The following, however, are given as a specimen:

" In silent gaze the tuneful choir among,
" Half pleas'd, half blushing, let the muse admire,
" While Bentley leads her sister art along,
" And bids the pencil answer to the lyre.

" See, in their course, each transitory thought,
" Fix'd by his touch, a lasting essence take;
" Each dream, in fancy's airy colouring wrought,
" To local symmetry and life awake!

" The tardy rhymes, that us'd to linger on,
" To censure cold, and negligent of fame;
" In swifter measures animated run,
" And catch a lustre from his genuine flame.

" Ah! could they catch his strength, his easy grace,
" His quick creation, his unerring line;
" The energy of Pope they might efface,
" And Dryden's harmony submit to mine.

" But not to one in this benighted age
" Is that diviner inspiration giv'n,
" That burns in Shakespear's or in Milton's page,
" The pomp and prodigality of heav'n,

" As when conspiring in the di'mond's blaze,
 " The meaner gems, that singly charm the sight,
 " Together dart their intermingled rays,
 " And dazzle with a luxury of light.

 " Enough for me, if to some feeling breast
 " My lines a secret sympathy impart,
 " And, as their pleasing influence flows confests'd,
 " A sigh of soft reflection heave the heart."

It appears, by a letter to Dr. Wharton, that Gray finished his Ode on the Progress of Poetry early in 1755. The Bard also was begun about the same time; and the following beautiful Fragment on the Pleasure arising from Vicissitude the next year. The merit of the two former pieces was not immediately perceived, nor generally acknowledged. Garrick wrote a few lines in their praise. Lloyd and Colman wrote, in concert, two Odes to "Oblivion" and "Obscurity," in which they were ridiculed with much ingenuity.

" Now the golden morn aloft
 " Waves her dew-bespangled wing,
 " With vermil cheek, and whisper soft,
 " She wooes the tardy spring;
 " Till April starts, and calls around
 " The sleeping fragrance from the ground,
 " And lightly o'er the living scene
 " Scatters his frehest, tenderest green.

" New-born flocks, in rustic dance,
 " Frisking ply their feeble feet;
 " Forgetful of their wint'ry trance,
 " The birds his presence greet:
 " But chief the skylark warbles high
 " His trembling, thrilling extacy;
 " And, lessening from the dazzled sight,
 " Melts into air and liquid light.

" Yesterday the fullen year
 " Saw the snowy whirlwind fly;
 " Mute was the music of the air,
 " The herd stood drooping by:
 " Their raptures now, that wildly flow,
 " No yesterday nor morrow know;
 " 'Tis man alone that joy descries
 " With forward and reverted eyes.

" Smiles on past misfortune's brow
 " Soft reflection's hand can trace,
 " And o'er the cheek of sorrow throw
 " A melancholy grace:

" While

“ While hope prolongs our happier hour;
“ Or deepest shades, that dimly lower,
“ And blacken round our weary way,
“ Gilds with a gleam of distant day.

“ Still where rosy pleasure leads,
“ See a kindred grief pursue,
“ Behind the steps that misery treads
“ Approaching comfort view:
“ The hues of bliss more brightly glow,
“ Chastiz’d by sabler tints of woe;
“ And blended form, with artful strife,
“ The strength and harmony of life.

“ See the wretch, that long has tost
“ On the thorny bed of Pain,
“ At length repair his vigour lost,
“ And breathe and walk again.
“ The meanest flow’ret of the vale,
“ The simplest note that swells the gale,
“ The common sun, the air, the skies,
“ To him are opening Paradise.”

Our Author’s reputation, as a Poet, was so high, that, on the death of Colley Cibber, in 1757, he had the honour of refusing the office of Poet-Laureat, to which he was probably induced by the disgrace brought upon it through the inability of some who had filled it.

His curiosity some time after drew him away from Cambridge to a lodging near the British Museum, where he resided near three years, reading and transcribing.

In 1762, on the death of Mr. Turner, Professor of Modern Languages and History at Cambridge, he was, according to his own expression, “ cockered and spirited up” to apply to Lord Bute for the succession. His Lordship refused him with all the politeness of a courtier, the office having been previously promised to Mr. Bocket, the tutor of Sir James Lowther.

His health being on the decline, in 1765 he undertook a journey to Scotland, conceiving he should derive benefit from exercise and change of situation. His account of that country, as far as it extends, is curious and elegant; for as his mind was comprehensive, it was employed in the contemplation of all the works of art, all the appearances of nature, and all the monuments of past events.

During his stay in Scotland, he contracted a friendship with Dr. Beattie, in whom he found, as he himself expresses it, a poet, a philosopher, and a good man. Through the intervention of his friend the Doctor, the Marischal College at Aberdeen offered him the degree of Doctor of Laws, which he thought it decent to decline, having omitted to take it at Cambridge.

In December, 1767, Dr. Beattie, still desirous that his country should leave a memento of its regard to the merit of our Poet, solicited his permission to print, at the University of Glasgow, an elegant edition of his works. Gray could not comply with his friend's request, as he had given his promise to Mr. Doddsley. However, as a compliment to them both, he presented them with a copy, containing a few notes, and the imitations of the old Norwegian poetry, intended to supplant the Long Story, which was printed at first to illustrate Mr. Bentley's designs.

In 1768 our Author obtained that office without solicitation, for which he had before applied without effect. The Professorship of Languages and History again became vacant, and he received an offer of it from the Duke of Grafton, who had succeeded Lord Bute in office. The place was valuable in itself, the salary being 400l. a year; but it was rendered peculiarly acceptable to Mr. Gray, as he obtained it without solicitation.

Soon after he succeeded to this office, the impaired state of his health rendered another journey necessary; and he visited, in 1769, the counties of Westmoreland and Cumberland. His remarks on the wonderful scenery which these northern regions display, he transmitted in epistolary journals to his friend, Dr. Wharton, which abound, according to Mr. Mason's elegant diction, dition, with all the wildness of Salvator, and the softness of Claude.

He appears to have been much affected by the anxiety he felt at holding a place without discharging the duties annexed to it. He had always designed reading lectures, but never put it in practice; and a consciousness of this neglect contributed not a little to increase the malady under which he had long laboured: nay, the office at length became so irksome, that he seriously proposed to resign it.

Towards the close of May, 1771, he removed from Cambridge to London, after having suffered violent attacks of an hereditary gout, to which he had long been subject, notwithstanding he had observed the most rigid abstemiousness throughout the whole course of his life. By the advice of his physicians, he removed from London to Kensington; the air of which place proved so salutary, that he was soon enabled to return to Cambridge, whence he designed to make a visit to his friend Dr. Wharton, at Old Park, near Durham; indulging a fond hope that the excursion would tend to the re-establishment of his health: but, alas! that hope proved delusive. On the 24th of July he was seized, while at dinner in the College hall, with a sudden nausea, which obliged him to retire to his chamber. The gout had fixed on his stomach in such a degree as to resist all the powers of medicine. On the 29th he was attacked with a strong convulsion, which returned with increased violence the ensuing day; and on the evening of the 31st of May, 1771, he departed this life in the 55th year of his age.

From the narrative of his friend, Mr. Mason, it appears, that Gray was actuated by motives of self improvement, and self gratification, in his application to the Muses, rather than any view to pecuniary emolument. His pursuits were in general disinterested; and as he was free from avarice on the one hand, so was he from extravagance on the other; being one of those few characters in the annals of literature, especially in the poetical class, who are devoid of self interest, and at the same time attentive to economy; but Mr. Mason adds, that he was induced to decline taking any advantage of his literary productions by a degree of pride, which influenced him to disdain the idea of being thought an author by profession.

It appears, from the same narrative, that Gray made considerable progress in the study of architecture, particularly the gothic. He endeavoured to trace this branch of the science, from the period of its commencement, through its various changes, till it arrived at its perfection in the time of Henry VIII. He applied himself also to the study of heraldry, of which he obtained a very competent knowledge, as appears from his Remarks on Saxon Churches, in the introduction to Mr. Bentham's History of Ely.

But the favourite study of Gray, for the last two years of his life, was natural history, which he rather resumed than began, as he had acquired some knowledge of botany in early life, while he was under the tuition of his uncle Antrobus. He wrote copious marginal notes to the works of Linnæus, and other writers in the three kingdoms of nature: and Mr. Mason further observes, that, excepting pure mathematics, and the studies dependent on that science, there was hardly any part of human learning in which he had not acquired a competent skill; in most of them a consummate mastery.

Mr. Mason has declined drawing any formal character of him; but has adopted one from a letter to James Boswell, Esq. by the Rev. Mr. Temple, Rector of St. Gluvias, in Cornwall, first printed anonymously in the London Magazine, which, as we conceive authentic, from the sanction of Mr. Mason, we shall therefore transcribe.

“ Perhaps he was the most learned man in Europe. He was equally acquainted with the elegant and profound parts of science; and that not superficially, but thoroughly. He knew every branch of history, both natural and civil; had read all the original historians of England, France, and Italy; and was a great antiquarian. Criticism, metaphysics, morals, and politics, made a principal part of his study; voyages and travels of all sorts were his favourite amusements; and he had a fine taste in painting, prints, architecture, and gardening. With such a fund of knowledge, his conversation must have been equally instructive and entertaining; but he was also a good man, a man of virtue and humanity. There is no character without some speck, some imperfection; and I think the greatest defect in his was an affectation in delicacy, or rather effeminacy, and a visible fastidiousness, or contempt and disdain of his inferiors in science. He also had, in some degree, that weakness which disgusted Voltaire so much in Mr. Congreve: though he seemed to value others chiefly according to the progress they had made in knowledge, yet he could not bear to be considered himself merely as a man of letters; and though without birth, or fortune, or station, his desire was to be looked upon as a private independent gentleman, who read for his amusement. Perhaps it may be said, What signifies so much knowledge, when it produced so little? Is it worth taking so much pains to leave no memorial but a few Poems? But let it be considered that Mr. Gray was, to others, at least innocently employed; to himself, certainly beneficially. His time passed agreeably; he was every day making some new acquisition in science; his mind was enlarged, his heart softened, his virtue strengthened; the world and mankind were shewn to him without a mask; and he was taught to consider every thing as trifling, and unworthy of the attention of a wise man, except the pursuit of knowledge and practice of virtue, in that state wherein God hath placed us."

In addition to this character, Mr. Mason has remarked, that Gray's effeminacy was affected most before

before those whom he did not wish to please; and that he is unjustly charged with making knowledge his sole reason of preference, as he paid his esteem to none whom he did not likewise believe to be good.

Dr. Johnson makes the following observations:—
“What has occurred to me, from the slight inspection of his letters, in which my undertaking has engaged me, is, that his mind had a large grasp; that his curiosity was unlimited, and his judgment cultivated; that he was a man likely to love much where he loved at all, but that he was fastidious, and hard to please. His contempt, however, is often employed, where I hope it will be approved, upon scepticism and infidelity. His short account of Shaftesbury I will insert.

“You say you cannot conceive how lord Shaftesbury came to be a philosopher in vogue; I will tell you: first, he was a lord; secondly, he was as vain as any of his readers; thirdly, men are very prone to believe what they do not understand; fourthly, they will believe any thing at all, provided they are under no obligation to believe it; fifthly, they love to take a new road, even when that road leads no where; sixthly, he was reckoned a fine writer, and seems always to mean more than he said. Would you have any more reasons? An interval of above forty years has pretty well destroyed the charm. A dead lord ranks with commoners: vanity is no longer interested in the matter; for a new road is become an old one.”

As a writer he had this peculiarity, that he did not write his pieces first rudely, and then correct them, but laboured every line as it arose in the train of composition; and he had a notion not very peculiar, that he could not write but at certain times, or at happy moments; a fantastic foppery, to which our kindness for a man of learning and of virtue wishes him to have been superior.

As a Poet he stands high in the estimation of the candid and judicious. His works are not numerous;
but

but they bear the marks of intense application, and careful revision. The Elegy in the Churchyard is deemed his master-piece; the subject is interesting, the sentiment simple and pathetic, and the versification charmingly melodious. This beautiful composition has been often selected by orators for the display of their rhetorical talents. But as the most finished productions of the human mind have not escaped censure, the works of our Author have undergone illiberal comments. His Elegy has been supposed defective in want of plan. Dr. Knox, in his Essays, has observed, "that it is thought by some to be no more than a confused heap of splendid ideas, thrown together without order and without proportion." Some passages have been censured by Kelly in the Babbler; and imitations of different authors have been pointed out by other critics. But these imitations cannot be ascertained, as there are numberless instances of coincidence of ideas; so that it is difficult to say, with precision, what is or is not a designed or accidental imitation.

Gray, in his Elegy in the Church-yard, has great merit in adverting to the most interesting passions of the human mind; yet his genius is not marked alone by the tender sensibility so conspicuous in that elegant piece; but there is a sublimity which gives it an equal claim to universal admiration.

His Odes on The Progress of Poetry, and of The Bard, according to Mr. Mason's account, "breathe the high spirit of lyric enthusiasm. The transitions are sudden and impetuous; the language full of fire and force; and the imagery carried, without impropriety, to the most daring height. They have been accused of obscurity: but the one can be obscure to those only who have not read Pindar; and the other only to those who are unacquainted with the history of our own nation."

Of his other lyric pieces, Mr. Wakefield, a learned and ingenious commentator, observes, that, though, like

like all other human productions, they are not without their defects, yet the spirit of poetry, and exquisite charms of the verse, are more than a compensation for those defects. The Ode on Eton College abounds with sentiments natural, and consonant to the feelings of humanity, exhibited with perspicuity of method, and in elegant, intelligible, and expressive language. The Sonnet on the Death of West, and the Epitaph on Sir William Williams, are as perfect compositions of the kind as any in our language.

Dr. Johnson was confessedly a man of great genius; but the partial and uncandid mode of criticism he has adopted in his remarks on the writings of Gray, has given to liberal minds great and just offence. According to Mr. Mason's account, he has subjected Gray's poetry to the most rigorous examination. Declining all consideration of the general plan and conduct of the pieces, he has confined himself solely to strictures on words and forms of expression; and Mr. Mason very pertinently adds, that verbal criticism is an ordeal which the most perfect composition cannot pass without injury.

He has also fallen under Mr. Wakefield's severest censure. This commentator affirms, that "he thinks a refutation of his strictures upon Gray a necessary service to the public, without which they might operate with a malignant influence upon the national taste. His censure, however, is too general, and expressed with too much vehemence; and his remarks betray, upon the whole, an unreasonable fastidiousness of taste, and an unbecoming illiberality of spirit. He appears to have turned an unwilling eye upon the beauties of Gray, because his jealousy would not suffer him to see such superlative merit in a cotemporary." These remarks of Mr. Wakefield appear to be well founded; and it has been observed, by another writer, that Dr. Johnson, being strongly influenced by his political and religious principles, was inclined to treat with the

the utmost severity some of the productions of our best writers; to which may be imputed that severity with which he censures the lyric performances of Gray. It is highly probable that no one poetical reader will universally subscribe to his decisions, though all may admire his vast intuitive knowledge, and power of discrimination.

In the first copy of this exquisite Poem, Mr. Mason observes, the conclusion was different from that which the Author afterwards composed; and though his after-thought was unquestionably the best, yet there is a pathetic melancholy in the four stanzas that were rejected, following, "With incense kindled at the Muses' flame," which highly claim preservation.

The thoughtless world to Majesty may bow,
Exalt the brave, and idolize success;
But more to innocence their safety owe,
Than pow'r or genius e'er conspir'd to bless.

And thou who, mindful of th' unhonour'd dead,
Dost in these notes their artless tale relate,
By night and lonely contemplation led,
To wander in the gloomy walks of fate,

Hark! how the sacred calm, that breathes around,
Bids every fierce tumultuous passion cease;
In still small accents whispering from the ground,
A grateful earnest of eternal peace.

No more, with reason and thyself at strife,
Give anxious cares and endless wishes room;
But, through the cool sequester'd vale of life,
Pursue the silent tenor of thy doom.

In one instance, the Doctor's inconsistency, and deviation from his general character, does him honour. After having commented with the most rigid severity on the poetical works of Gray, as if conscious of the injustice done him, he seems to apologize by the following declaration, which concludes his Criticism, and shall conclude the Memoirs of our Author.

"In the character of his Elegy (says Johnson) I rejoice and concur with the common reader; for, by the common sense of readers, uncorrupted with literary prejudices, prejudices, after all the refinements of subtilty, and the dogmatism of learning, must be finally decided all claim to poetical honours. The Church-yard abounds with images which find a mirror in every mind, and with sentiments to which every bosom returns an echo. The four stanzas beginning, Yet e'en these bones are to me original; I have never seen the notions in any other place; yet he that reads them here, persuades himself that he has always felt them. Had Gray written often thus, it had been vain to blame, and useless to praise him."

THE TEARS OF GENIUS,

AN ODE,

TO THE MEMORY OF MR. GRAY.

(By J. T-----.)

ON Cham's fair banks, where Learning's hallow'd sanc
Majestic rises on th' astonish'd sight,
Where oft the Muse has led the fav'rite swain,
And warm'd his soul with heav'n's inspiring light;
Beneath the covert of the sylvan shade,
Where deadly cypress, mix'd with mournful yew,
Far o'er the vale a gloomy stillness spread,
Celestial Genius burst upon the view.

The bloom of youth, the majesty of years,
The soften'd aspect, innocent and kind,
The sigh of sorrow, and the streaming tears,
Resistless all, their various pow'r combin'd.

In her fair hand a silver harp she bore,
Whose magic notes, soft warbling from the string,
Give tranquil joys the breast ne'er knew before,
Or raise the soul on rapture's airy wing.
By grief impell'd, I heard her heave a sigh,
While thus the rapid strain resounded thro' the sky:

Haste ye sister pow'rs of Song!
Hasten from the shady grove,
Where the river rolls along
Sweetly to the voice of love;

Where, indulging mirthful pleasures,
Light you press the flow'ry green,
And from Flora's blooming treasures
Cull the wreath for Fancy's queen;

Where your gently-flowing numbers,
Floating on the fragrant breeze,
Sink the soul in pleasing slumbers
On the downy bed of ease.

For graver strains prepare the plaintive lyre,
That wakes the softest feelings of the soul;
Let lonely grief the melting verse inspire,
Let deep'ning sorrow's solemn accents roll.

Rack'd by the hand of rude Disease,
Behold our fav'rite Poet lies!
While ev'ry object form'd to please
Far from his couch ungrateful flies.

The blissful Muse, whose fav'ring smile
So lately warm'd his peaceful breast,
Diffusing heav'nly joys the while,
In Transport's radiant garments drest,
With darksome grandeur, and enfeebled blaze,
Sinks in the shades of night, and shuns his eager gaze.

The gaudy train who wait on Spring,*
Ting'd with the pomp of vernal pride,
The youth, who mount on pleasure's wing,†
And idly sport on Thames's side,
With cool regard their various arts employ,
Nor rouse the drooping mind, nor give the pause of joy.

Ha! what forms, with port sublime,§
Glide along in sullen mood,
Scorning all the threats of time,
High above misfortune's flood!

They seize their harps, they strike the lyre,
With rapid hand, with freedom's fire;
Obedient Nature hears the lofty sound,
And Snowdon's airy cliffs the heavenly strains resound.

In pomp of state behold they wait,
With arms outstretch'd and aspects kind,
To snatch on high to yonder sky
The child of Fancy left behind;
Forgot the woes of Cambria's fatal day,
By rapture's blaze impell'd, they swell the artless lay.

But, ah! in vain they strive to sooth
With gentle arts the tort'ring hours.
Adversity ‡ with rankling tooth
Her baleful gifts profusely pours.

Behold she comes! the fiend forlorn,
Array'd in Horror's settled gloom;
She strews the brier and prickly thorn,
And triumphs in th' infernal doom;
With frantic fury, and insatiate rage, [page.
She gnaws the throbbing breast, and blasts the glowing

No more the soft Eolian flute||
Breathes thro' the heart the melting strain,
The pow'rs of Harmony are mute,
And leave the once-delightful plain;

§ Bard, an Ode. ‡ Ode to Adversity. || The Progress of Poetry.

Yet stay, O stay! celestial Pow'rs!
And with a hand of kind regard
Dispel the boist'rous storm that lours
Destructive on the fav'rite bard;
O watch with me his last expiring breath,
And snatch him from the arms of dark oblivious Death!

Hark! the Fatal Sisters † join,
And, with horror's mutt'ring sounds,
Weave the tissue of his line,
While the dreadful spell resounds,

"Hail, ye midnight Sisters! hail!
"Drive the shuttle swift along,
"Let our secret charms prevail
"O'er the valiant and the strong;

"O'er the glory of the land,
"O'er the innocent and gay,
"O'er the Muses' tuneful band,
"Weave the fun'ral web of Gray."

'Tis done, 'tis done---the iron hand of Pain,
With ruthless fury and corrosive force,
Racks ev'ry joint, and seizes ev'ry vein:
He sinks, he groans, he falls, a lifeless corse!

Thus fades the flow'r, nipp'd by the frozen gale,
Tho' once so sweet, so lovely to the eye;
Thus the tall oaks, when boist'rous storms assail,
Torn from the earth, a mighty ruin lie.

Ye sacred Sisters of the plaintive verse,
Now let the stream of fond affection flow;
O pay your tribute o'er the slow-drawn hearse
With all the manly dignity of woe!

Oft' when the curfew tolls its parting knell,
With solemn pause yon' Churchyard's gloom survey,
While sorrow's sighs and tears of pity tell
How just the moral of the poet's lay.*

O'er his green grave, in Contemplation's guise,
Oft' let the pilgrim drop a silent tear,
Oft' let the shepherd's tender accents rise,
Big with the sweets of each revolving year,
Till prostrate Time adore his deathless name,
Fix'd on the solid base of adamantine fame.

ODE I.

ON THE SPRING.

LO! where the rosy-bosom'd hours,
Fair Venus' train, appear,
Disclose the long-expecting flow'rs,
And wake the purple year,
'The attic warbler pours her throat 5
Responsive to the cuckoo's note,
The untaught harmony of spring,
While, whisp'ring pleasure as they fly,
Cool zephyrs thro' the clear blue sky
Their gather'd fragrance fling. 10

Where'er the oak's thick branches stretch
A broader, browner shade,
Where'er the rude and moss-grown beech
O'er-canopies the glade,*
Beside some water's rushy brink 15
With me the Muse shall sit, and think
(At ease reclin'd in rustic state)
How vain the ardour of the crowd,
How low, how little, are the proud,
How indigent the great! 20

Still is the toiling hand of Care,
The panting herds repose,
Yet hark! how thro' the peopled air
The busy murmur glows!
The insect youth are on the wing, 25
Eager to taste the honey'd spring,

Such is the race of man,
And they that creep, and they that fly,
Shall end where they began.
Alike the busy and the gay 35
But flutter thro' life's little day,
In Fortune's varying colours drest ;
Brush'd by the hand of rough Mischance,
Or chill'd by Age, their airy dance
They leave, in dust to rest. 40

Methinks I hear, in accents low,
The sportive kind reply,
Poor Moralist ! and what art thou ?
A solitary fly !
Thy joys no glitt'ring female meets, 45
No hive hast thou of hoarded sweets,
No painted plumage to display ;
On hasty wings thy youth is flown,
Thy sun is set, thy spring is gone—
We frolic while 'tis May. 50

DEATH OF A FAVOURITE CAT,

Drowned in a Tub of Gold Fishes.

'T WAS on a lofty vase's side,

Gaz'd on the lake below. 6

Her conscious tan her joy declar'd;
The fair round face, the snowy beard,
The velvet of her paws,
Her coat that with the tortoise vies,
Her ears of jet, and em'rald eyes,
She saw, and purr'd applause.

Still had she gaz'd, but, 'midst the tide,
Two angel forms were seen to glide,
The Genii of the stream;
Their scaly armour's Tyrian hue,
Thro' richest purple, to the view
Betray'd a golden gleam.

The hapless nymph with wonder saw:
A whisker first, and then a claw,
With many an ardent wish,
She stretch'd in vain to reach the prize:
What female heart can gold despise?
What Cat's averse to fish?

24

Presumpt'ous maid! with looks intent,
Again she stretch'd, again she bent,
Nor knew the gulf between:
(Malignant Fate sat by and smil'd,)
The slipp'ry verge her feet beguil'd;
She tumbled headlong in.

30

Eight times emerging from the flood,
She mew'd to ev'ry wat'ry god
Some speedy aid to send.
No Dolphin came, no Nereid stirr'd,
Nor cruel Tom or Susan heard:
A fav'rite has no friend!

From hence, ye Beauties! undeceiv'd,
Know one false step is ne'er retriev'd,
And be with caution bold:
Not all that tempts your wand'ring eyes,
And heedless hearts, is lawful prize,
Nor all that glisters gold.

 That crown the watry glade
 Where grateful Science still adores
 Her Henry's * holy shade ;
 And ye that from the stately brow 5
 Of Windsor's heights th' expanse below
 Of grove, of lawn, of mead, survey,
 Whose turf, whose shade, whose flow'rs, among Wanders the hoary Thames along
 His silver-winding way : 10

Ah happy hills ! ah pleasing shade !
 Ah fields belov'd in vain !
 Where once my careless childhood stray'd,
 A stranger yet to pain !
 I feel the gales that from ye blow 15
 A momentary bliss bestow,
 As waving fresh their gladsome wing
 My weary soul they seem to sooth,
 And, redolent † of joy and youth,
 To breathe a second spring. 20

Say, father Thames ! for thou hast seen
 Full many a sprightly race,
 Disporting on thy margin green,
 The paths of pleasure trace,
 Who foremost now delight to cleave 25
 With pliant arm thy glassy wave ?
 The captive linnet which enthrall ?
 What idle progeny succeed
 To chase the rolling circle's speed,
 Or urge the flying ball ? 30

Still as they run they look behind,
They hear a voice in ev'ry wind,
And snatch a fearful joy. 40

Gay hope is theirs, by fancy fed,
Less pleasing when possess'd ;
The tear forgot as soon as shed,
The sunshine of the breast ;
Theirs buxom health of rosy hue, 45
Wild wit, invention ever new,
And lively cheer of vigour born ;
The thoughtless day, the easy night,
The spirits pure, the slumbers light,
That fly th' approach of morn. 50

Alas ! regardless of their doom,
The little victims play !
No sense have they of ills to come,
Nor care beyond to day :
Yet see how all around 'em wait 55
The ministers of human fate,
And black Misfortune's baleful train !
Ah ! shew them where in ambush stand,
To seize their prey, the murd'rous band !
Ah ! tell them they are men. 60

These shall the fury Passions tear,
The vultures of the mind,
Disdainful Anger, pallid Fear,
And Shame that sculks behind ;
Or pining Love shall waste their youth, 65
Or Jealousy, with rankling tooth,

And Envy wan, and faded Care,
Grim-visag'd, comfortless Despair,
And Sorrow's piercing dart.

70

Ambition this shall tempt to rise,
Then whirl the wretch from high,
To bitter Scorn a sacrifice,
And grinning Infamy:
The stings of Falsehood those shall try,
And hard Unkindness' alter'd eye,
That mocks the tear it forc'd to flow;
And keen Remorse, with blood defil'd,
And moody Madness * laughing wild

A grisly troop are seen,
The painful family of Death,
More hideous than their queen:
This racks the joints, this fires the veins,
That ev'ry lab'ring sinew strains,
Those in the deeper vitals rage;
Lo! Poverty, to fill the band,
That numbs the soul with icy hand,
And slow-consuming Age.

ODE IV.
TO ADVERSITY.

-----Ζῆνα
Τὸν φρονεῖν βροτοῦς ὀδῶσαντα, τῷ πάθει μαθὼν
Θέντα κυρίως ἔχειν.
Aeschylus in Agamemnone.

DAUGHTER of Jove, relentless pow'r,
Thou tamer of the human breast,
Whose iron scourge and tort'ring hour
The bad affright, afflict the best!
Bound in thy adamantine chain, 5
The proud are taught to taste of pain,
And purple tyrants vainly groan
With pangs unfelt before, unpity'd and alone.

When first thy fire to send on earth
Virtue, his darling child, design'd, 10
To thee he gave the heav'nly birth,
And bad to form her infant mind;
Stern rugged nurse! thy rigid lore
With patience many a year she bore;
What sorrow was thou bad'st her know, 15
And from her own she learn'd to melt at others' woe.

Scar'd at thy frown terrific fly
Self-pleasing Folly's idle brood,
Wild Laughter, Noise, and thoughtless Joy,
And leave us leisure to be good. 20
Light they disperse; and with them go
The summer friend, the flatt'ring foe;
By vain Prosperity receiv'd,
To her they vow their truth, and are again believ'd.

Wisdom, in sable garb array'd, 25
Immers'd in rapt'rous thought profound,
And Melancholy, silent maid,
With leaden eye, that loves the ground,

Still on thy solemn steps attend ;
Warm Charity, the gen'ral friend, 30
With Justice, to herself severe,
And Pity, dropping soft the sadly-pleasing tear.

Oh! gently on thy suppliant's head,
Dread goddess! lay thy chaste'ning hand,
Not in thy Gorgon terrors clad, 35
Nor circled with the vengeful band :
(As by the impious thou art seen,)
With thund'ring voice and threatening mien,
With screaming Horror's fun'ral cry,
Despair, and fell Disease, and ghastly Poverty. 40

Thy form benign, O Goddess! wear,
Thy milder influence impart,
Thy philosophic train be there,
To soften, not to wound, my heart :
The gen'rous spark extinct revive ; 45
Teach me to love and to forgive ;
Exact my own defects to scan,
What others are to feel, and know myself a man. 48

The various sources of poetry, which gives life and lustre to all it touches, are here described, as well in its quiet majestic progress, enriching every subject (otherwise dry and barren) with all the pomp of diction, and luxuriant harmony of numbers, as in its more rapid and irresistible course, when swoln and hurried away by the conflict of tumultuous passions.

‡ Hast thou cloathed his neck with thunder? Job.

§ Words that weep and tears that speak. Cowley.

|| We have had in our language no other odes of the sublime kind than that of Dryden on St. Cecilia's day; for Cowley, who had his merit, yet wanted judgment, style, and harmony, for such a task. That of Pope is not worthy of so great a man. Mr. Mason, indeed, of late days, has touched the true chords, and, with a masterly hand, in some of his chorusses-----above all, in the last of Caractacus;

Hark! heard ye not yon' footstep dread? &c.

¶ Διὸς πρὸς ὄρνιχα θεῖον. Olymp. ii.

Pindar compares himself to that bird, and his enemies to ravens that croak and clamour in vain below, while it pursues its flight regardless of their noise.

THE BARD. PINDARICK.

THE following Ode is founded on a Tradition current in Wales, that Edward I. when he completed the Conquest of that Country, ordered all the Bards that fell into his Hands to be put to Death.

I. 1.

‘ RUIN seize thee, ruthless King!
 ‘ Confusion on thy banners wait;
 ‘ Tho’ fann’d by Conquest’s crimson wing,
 ‘ They mock the air with idle state.*
 ‘ Helm nor hauberk’s † twisted mail,
 ‘ Nor e’en thy virtues, tyrant! shall avail
 ‘ To save thy secret soul from nightly fears;
 ‘ From Cambria’s curse, from Cambria’s tears!
 Such were the sounds that o’er the crested pride‡
 Of the first Edward scatter’d wild dismay, 10
 As down the steep of Snowdon’s shaggy side§
 He wound with toilsome march his long array:
 Stout Glo’ster || stood aghast in speechless trance:
 To arms! cry’d Mortimer, ¶ and couch’d his quiv’- ring lance.

* Mocking the air with colours idly spread.

Shakesp. King John.

† The hauberk was a texture of steel ringlets or rings interwoven, forming a coat of mail that sat close to the body, and adapted itself to every motion.

§ Snowdon was a name given by the Saxons to that mountainous track which the Welsh themselves call Craigan-eryri: it included all the highlands of Caernarvonshire and Merionethshire, as far east as the river Conway. R. Hygden, speaking of the Castle of Conway, built by King Edward I. says, Ad certum amnis Conway ad clivum montis Every: and Matthew of Westminster, (ad an. 1183) Apud Aberconway ad pedes montis Snowdoniae fecit erigi castrum forte.

|| Gilbert de Clare, surnamed the Red, Earl of Gloucester and Hertford, son-in-law to King Edward.

¶ Edmund de Mortimer, Lord of Wigmore. They both were Lords Marchers, whose lands lay on the borders of Wales, and probably accompanied the King in this expedition.

I. 2.

On a rock, whose haughty brow 15
 Frowns o'er old Conway's foaming flood,
 Rob'd in the fable garb of woe,
 With haggard eyes the poet stood ;
 (Loose his beard, and hoary hair*
 Stream'd like a meteor to the troubled air,†) 20
 And with a master's hand and prophet's fire
 Struck the deep sorrows of his lyre.
 ' Hark how each giant oak and desert cave
 ' Sighs to the torrent's awful voice beneath !
 ' O'er thee, oh King ! their hundred arms they wave,
 ' Revenge on thee in hoarser murmurs breathe ; 26
 ' Vocal no more, since Cambria's fatal day,
 ' To highborn Hoel's harp, or soft Llewellyn's lay.

I. 3.

' Cold is Cadwallo's tongue,
 ' That hush'd the stormy main ; 30
 ' Brave Urien sleeps upon his craggy bed :
 ' Mountains ! ye moan in vain
 ' Modrid, whose magic song
 ' Made huge Plinlimmon bow his cloud-topp'd head.
 ' On dreary Arvon's ‡ shore they lie, 35
 ' Smear'd with gore and ghastly pale ;
 ' Far, far aloof th' affrighted ravens sail,
 ' The famish'd eagle § screams and passes by.

§ Camden and others observe, that eagles used annually to build their aerie among the rocks of Snowdon, which from thence (as some think) were named by the Welsh, Craigian eryri, or the Craggs of the Eagles. At this day (I am told) the highest point of Snowdon is called The Eagle's Nest. That bird is certainly no stranger to this island, as the Scots, and the people of Cumberland, Westmoreland, &c. can testify: it even has built its nest in the Peak of Derbyshire. [See Willoughby's Ornithol. published by Ray.]

THE Author once had Thoughts (in concert with a Friend) of giving a History of English Poetry. In the Introduction to it he meant to have produced some Specimens of the Style that reigned in ancient Times among the neighbouring Nations, or those who had subdued the greater Part of this Island, and were our Progenitors: the following three Imitations made a Part of them. He afterwards dropped his Design; especially after he had heard that it was already in the Hands of a Person well qualified to do it Justice both by his Taste and his Researches into Antiquity.

THE FATAL SISTERS.

PREFACE.

IN the 11th Century, Sigurd, Earl of the Orkney Islands, went with a Fleet of Ships, and a considerable Body of Troops, into Ireland, to the Assistance of Sigtryg with the silken Beard, who was then making War on his Father-in-Law, Brian, King of Dublin. The Earl and all his Forces were cut to Pieces, and Sigtryg was in Danger of a total Defeat; but the Enemy had a greater Loss by the Death of Brian, their King, who fell in the Action. On Christmas-day (the Day of the Battle) a Native of Caithness, in Scotland, saw, at a Distance, a Number of Persons on Horseback riding full speed towards a Hill, and seeming to enter into it. Curiosity led him to follow them, till, looking through an opening in the Rocks, he saw Twelve gigantic Figures, resembling Women: they were all employed about a Loom; and as they wove they sung the following dreadful Song, which, when they had finished, they tore the Web into twelve Pieces, and each taking her Portion, galloped Six to the North, and as many to the South.

NOW the storm begins to low'r,
(Haste, the loom of hell prepare,)
Iron-fleet of arrowy show'r*
Hurtles † in the darken'd air.

Glitt'ring lances are the loom
Where the dusky warp we strain,
Weaving many a soldier's doom,
Orkney's woe and Randver's bane.

Note --- The Valkyriur were female divinities, servants of Odin (or Woden) in the Gothic mythology. Their name signifies Chusers of the Slain. They were mounted on swift horses, with drawn swords in their hands, and in the throng of battle selected such as were destined to slaughter, and conducted them to Valkalla, (the Hall of Odin, or Paradise of the Brave,) where they attended the banquet, and served the departed heroes with horns of mead and ale.

See the grisly texture grow,
('Tis of human entrails made,)
And the weights that play below
Each a gasping warrior's head.

Shafts for shuttles, dipt in gore,
Shoot the trembling cords along:
Sword, that once a monarch bore,
Keep the tissue close and strong.

Mista, black, terrific maid!
Sangrida and Hilda see,
Join the wayward work to aid;
'Tis the woof of victory.

20

Ere the ruddy sun be set
Pikes must shiver, jav'lines sing,
Blade with clatt'ring buckler meet,
Hauberk crash, and helmet ring.

(Weave the crimson web of war)
Let us go, and let us fly,
Where our friends the conflict share,
Where they triumph, where they die.

28

As the paths of Fate we tread,
Wading thro' th' ensanguin'd field,
Gondula and Geira spread
O'er the youthful king your shield.

32

We the reins to slaughter give,
Ours to kill and ours to spare:
Spite of danger he shall live;
(Weave the crimson web of war.)

They whom once the desert beach
Pent within its bleak domain,
Soon their ample way shall stretch
O'er the plenty of the plain.

40

Low the dauntless earlis laid,
Gor'd with many a gaping wound:
Fate demands a nobler head;
Soon a king shall bite the ground.

Long his loss shall Eirin * weep,
Ne'er again his likeness see;
Long her strains in sorrow steep,
Strains of immortality!

48

Horror covers all the heath,
Clouds of carnage blot the sun:
Sisters! weave the web of death:
Sisters! cease; the work is done.

52

Hail the task and hail the hands!
Songs of joy and triumph sing;
Joy to the victorious bands,
Triumph to the younger king.

56

Mortal! thou that hear'st the tale,
Learn the tenour of our song;
Scotland! thro' each winding vale
Far and wide the notes prolong.

60

Sisters! hence with spurs of speed;
Each her thund'ring falchion wield;
Each bestride her fable steed:
Hurry, hurry, to the field.

THE DESCENT OF ODIN.

FROM THE NORSE TONGUE.

To be found in Bartholinus, de causis contemnendæ mortis;

Hafniæ, 1689, Quarto.

Upreis Odinn allda gaur, &c.

UPROSE the king of Men with speed,
 And saddled straight his cole-black steed;
 Down the yawning steep he rode
 That leads to Hela's || drear abode.
 Him the Dog of Darkness spy'd; 5
 His shaggy throat he open'd wide,
 While from his jaws, with carnage fill'd,
 Foam and human gore distill'd:
 Hoarse he bays with hideous din,
 Eyes that glow and fangs that grin, 10
 And long pursues with fruitless yell
 The father of the pow'rful spell.
 Onward still his way he takes,
 (The groaning earth beneath him shakes,)
 Till full before his fearless eyes 15
 The portals nine of hell arise.
 Right against the eastern gate,
 By the moss-grown pile he late,
 Where long of yore to sleep was laid
 The dust of the prophetic maid. 20
 Facing to the northern clime,
 Thrice he trac'd the Runic rhyme,
 Thrice pronounc'd, in accents dread,
 The thrilling verse that wakes the dead,
 Till from out the hollow ground 25
 Slowly breath'd a fullen sound.

PROP. What call unknown, what charms presume
 To break the quiet of the tomb?

|| Nifheimr, the hell of the Gothic nations, consisted of nine worlds, to which were devoted all such as died of sickness, old age, or by any other means than in battle; over it presided Hela, the goddess of Death.

Who thus annals my troubled spirit,
And drags me from the realms of Night?
Long on these mould'ring bones have beat
The winter's snow, the summer's heat,
The drenching dews and driving rain!
Let me, let me sleep again.

Who is he, with voice unblest,
That calls me from the bed of rest?

ODIN. A traveller, to thee unknown,
Is he that calls, a warrior's son.
Thou the deeds of light shalt know;
Tell me what is done below,
For whom yon' glitt'ring board is spread,
Drest for whom yon' golden bed?

PROPH. Mantling in the goblet see
The pure bev'rage of the bee,
O'er it hangs the shield of gold;
'Tis the drink of Balder bold:
Balder's head to death is giv'n;
Pain can reach the sons of Heav'n!
Unwilling I my lips uncloze;
Leave me, leave me to repose.

ODIN. Once again my call obey:
Prophetess! arise, and say,
What dangers Odin's child await,
Who the author of his fate?

PROPH. In Hoder's hand the hero's doom;
His brother sends him to the tomb.
Now my weary lips I close;
Leave me, leave me to repose.

ODIN. Prophetess! my spell obey;
Once again arise, and say,
Who th' avenger of his guilt,
By whom shall Hoder's blood be spilt?

PROPH. In the caverns of the west,
By Odin's fierce embrace compest,
A wond'rous boy shall Rinda bear,
Who ne'er shall comb his raven-hair,
Nor wash his visage in the stream,
Nor see the sun's departing beam,

Till he on Hoder's corse shall smile
 Flaming on the fun'ral pile.
 Now my weary lips I close;
 Leave me, leave me to repose.

ODIN. Yet a while my call obey:
 Prophetess! awake, and say,
 What virgins these, in speechless woe,
 That bend to earth their solemn brow,
 That their flaxen tresses tear,
 And snowy veils that float in air?
 Tell me whence their sorrows rose,
 Then I leave thee to repose.

80

PROPH. Ha! no traveller art thou;
 King of Men, I know thee now;
 Mightiest of a mighty line——

ODIN. No boding maid of skill divine
 Art thou, no prophetess of good,
 But mother of the giant-brood!

85

PROPH. Hie thee hence, and boast at home,
 That never shall enquirer come
 To break my iron-sleep again
 Till Lok † has burst his tenfold chain;
 Never till substantial Night
 Has re-assum'd her ancient right,
 Till, wrapp'd in flames, in ruin hurl'd,
 Sinks the fabric of the world.

90

† Lok is the evil being, who continues in chains till the twilight of the gods approaches, when he shall break his bonds; the human race, the stars, and sun, shall disappear, the earth sink in the seas, and fire consume the skies: even Odin himself, and his kindred deities, shall perish. For a farther explanation of this mythology, see Introduction à l'Histoire de Danemarck, par Mons. Mallat, 1775, 4to; or rather a translation of it published in 1770, and entitled Northern Antiquities, in which some mistakes in the original are judiciously corrected.

ODE IX.

THE DEATH OF HOEL.

From the Welsh of Aneurim, styled

THE MONARCH OF THE BARDS.

He flourished about the Time of Talieffin, A. D. 570.This Ode is extracted from the Gododin.

[See Mr. Evans's Specimens, p. 71, 73.]

HAD I but the torrent's might,
 With headlong rage, and wild affright,
 Upon Deïra's squadrons hurl'd,
 To rush and sweep them from the world!

Too, too secure in youthful pride,
 By them my friend, my Hoel, dy'd,
 Great Cian's son; of Madoc old,
 He ask'd no heaps of hoarded gold;
 Alone in Nature's wealth array'd,
 He ask'd and had the lovely maid.

To Cattræth's vale, in glitt'ring row,
 Twice two hundred warriors go;
 Ev'ry warrior's manly neck
 Chains of regal honour deck,
 Wreath'd in many a golden link:
 From the golden cup they drink
 Nectar that the bees produce,
 Or the grape's ecstatic juice.

Flush'd with mirth and hope they burn,
 But none from Cattræth's vale return,
 Save Aëron brave and Conan strong,
 (Bursting through the bloody throng,
 And I, the meanest of them all,

That live to weep and sing their fall.

ODE X.

THE TRIUMPH OF OWEN.

A FRAGMENT.

From Mr. Evans's Specimen of the Welsh Poetry, London, 1764, Quarto.

Advertisement.

OWEN succeeded his father Griffin in the Principality of North Wales,
A. D. 1120: this battle was near forty years afterwards.

OWEN's praise demands my song,
Owen swift and Owen strong,
Fairest flow'r of Rod'rick's stem,
Gwyneth's * shield and Britain's gem.
He nor heaps his brooded stores,
Nor on all profusely pours ;
Lord of ev'ry regal art,
Lib'ral hand and open heart.

Big with hosts of mighty name,
Squadrons three against him came ;
This the force of Eirin hiding ;
Side by side as proudly riding
On her shadow long and gay
Lochlin † plows the watry way ;
There the Norman sails afar,
Catch the winds and join the war ;
Black and huge along they sweep,
Burthens of the angry deep.

10

Dauntless on his native sands
The Dragon son ‡ of Mona stands ;
In glitt'ring arms and glory drest,
High he rears his ruby crest ;
There the thund'ring strokes begin,
There the press and there the din :

20

* North Wales. † Denmark.

‡ The red Dragon is the device of Cadwalladar, which all his descendants bore on their banners.

Talymalfra's rocky shore 25
 Echoing to the battle's roar.
 Check'd by the torrent-tide of blood,
 Backward Meinai rolls his flood,
 While, heap'd his master's feet around,
 Prostrate warriors gnaw the ground. 30
 Where his glowing eye-balls turn
 Thousand banners round him burn;
 Where he points his purple spear
 Hasty, hasty rout is there;
 Marking, with indignant eye, 35
 Fear to stop and Shame to fly:
 There Confusion, Terrour's child,
 Conflict fierce and Ruin wild,
 Agony, that pants for breath,
 Despair and Honourable Death. 40

ODE XI.

FOR MUSICK.

Performed in the Senate-house, Cambridge, July 1, 1769, at the Installation of his Grace Augustus-Henry-Fitzroy, Duke of Grafton, Chancellor of the University.

I.

“ HENCE, avaunt! ('tis holy ground,) 5
 “ Comus and his midnight crew,
 “ And Ignorance with looks profound,
 “ And dreaming Sloth of pallid hue,
 “ Mad Sedition's cry profane,
 “ Servitude that hugs her chain,
 “ Nor in these consecrated bow'rs,
 “ Let painted Flatt'ry hide her serpent-train in flow'rs;
 “ Nor Envy base, nor creeping Gain,
 “ Dare the Muse's walk to stain, 10
 “ While bright-ey'd Science watches round:
 “ Hence, away! 'tis holy ground.”

II.

From yonder realms of empyrean day
 Bursts on my ear th' indignant lay;

There sits the fainted sage, the bard divine, 15
 The few whom Genius gave to shine
 Thro' ev'ry unborn age and undiscover'd clime.
 Rapt in celestial transport they,
 Yet hither oft' a glance from high
 They send of tender sympathy, 20
 To bless the place where on their op'ning soul
 First the genuine ardour stole.
 'Twas Milton struck the deep-ton'd shell,
 And, as the choral warblings round him swell,
 Meek Newton's self bends from his state sublime, 25
 And nods his hoary head, and listens to the rhyme.

III.

" Ye brown o'er-arching groves !
 " That contemplation loves,
 " Where willowy Camus lingers with delight,
 " Oft' at the blush of dawn, 30
 " I trod your level lawn,
 " Oft' woo'd the gleam of Cynthia silver-bright
 " In cloisters dim, far from the haunts of Folly,
 " With Freedom by my side and soft-ey'd Melancholy."

IV.

But hark ! the portals sound, and pacing forth, 35
 With solemn steps and slow,
 High potentates, and dames of royal birth,
 And mitred fathers, in long order go :
 Great Edward, with the Lilies on his brow*
 From haughty Gallia torn, 40
 And sad Chatillon,† on her bridal morn,
 That wept her bleeding love, and princely Clare,‡

* Edward III. who added the Fleur de lys of France to the arms of England. He founded Trinity-college.

† Mary de Valentia, Countess of Pembroke, daughter of Guy de Chatillon, Comte de St. Paul in France, of whom tradition says, that her husband, Audemar de Valentia, Earl of Pembroke, was slain at a tournament on the day of his nuptials. She was the foundress of Pembroke-College or Hall, under the name of Aula Mariæ de Valentia.

‡ Elizabeth de Burg, Countess of Clare, was wife of John de Burg, son and heir of the Earl of Ulster, and daughter of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester, by Joan of Acres, daughter of Edward I. hence the Poet gives her the epithet of princely. She founded Clare-hall.

And Anjou's Heroïne,§ and the paler Rose,||
 The rival of her crown, and of her woes,
 And either Henry ¶ there, 45
 The murder'd saint, and the majestic lord,
 That broke the bonds of Rome.
 (The tears, their little triumphs o'er,
 Their human passions now no more,
 Save charity, that glows beyond the tomb,) 50
 All that on Granta's fruitful plain
 Rich streams of regal bounty pour'd,
 And bad those awful fanes and turrets rise
 To hail their Fitzroy's festal morning come;
 And thus they speak in soft accord 55
 The liquid language of the skies:

V.

"What is grandeur, what is power?
 "Heavier toil, superior pain,
 "What the bright reward we gain?
 "The grateful mem'ry of the good. 60
 "Sweet is the breath of vernal show'r,
 "The bee's collected treasures sweet,
 "Sweet Music's melting fall, but sweeter yet
 "The still small voice of Gratitude."

VI.

Foremost, and leaning from her golden cloud, 65
 The venerable Marg'ret * see!
 "Welcome, my noble son!" she cries aloud,
 "To this thy kindred train and me:

§ Margaret of Anjou, wife of Henry VI. foundress of Queen's College.
 The Poet has celebrated her conjugal fidelity in a former ode.

|| Elizabeth Widville, wife of Henry IV. (hence called the paler Rose, as being of the house of York.) She added to the foundation of Margaret of Anjou.

¶ Henry VI. and VII. the former the founder of King's, the latter the greatest benefactor to Trinity-college.

* Countess of Richmond and Derby, the mother of Henry VII. foundress of St. John's and Christ's Colleges.

57

" Pleas'd in thy lineaments we trace
 " A Tudor's † fire, a Beaufort's grace. 70
 " Thy lib'ral heart, thy judging eye,
 " The flow'r unheeded shall descry,
 " And bid it round heav'n's altars shed
 " The fragrance of its blushing head ;
 " Shall raise from earth the latent gem 75
 " To glitter on the diadem.

VII.

" Lo! Granta waits to lead her blooming band ;
 " Not obvious, not obtrusive, she
 " No vulgar praise no venal incense flings,
 " Nor dares with courtly tongue refin'd 80
 " Profane thy inborne royalty of mind :
 " She reveres herself and thee.
 " With modest pride to grace thy youthful brow
 " The laureate wreath * that Cecil wore she brings,
 " And to thy just thy gentle hand 85
 " Submits the fasces of her sway ;
 " While spirits blest above, and men below,
 " Join with glad voice the loud symphonious lay.

VIII.

" Thro' the wild waves, as they roar,
 " With watchful eye, and dauntless mien, 90
 " Thy steady course of honour keep,
 " Nor fear the rock nor seek the shore :
 " The star of Brunswick smiles serene,
 " And gilds the horrors of the deep." 95

† The Countess was a Beaufort, and married to a Tudor; hence the application of this line to the Duke of Grafton, who claims descent from both these families.

* Lord Treasurer Burleigh was Chancellor of the University in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

MISCELLANIES.

A LONG STORY.

Advertisement.

MR. GRAY'S Elegy, previous to its publication, was handed about in MS. and had, amongst other admirers, the Lady Cobham, who resided in the mansion-house at Stoke-Pogeis. The performance inducing her to wish for the Author's acquaintance, Lady Schaub and Miss Speed, then at her house, undertook to introduce her to it. These two ladies waited upon the Author at his aunt's solitary habitation, where he at that time resided, and not finding him at home, they left a card behind them. Mr. Gray, surpris'd at such a compliment, returned the visit; and as the beginning of this intercourse bore some appearance of romance, he gave the humorous and lively account of it which the Long Story contains.

IN Britain's isle, no matter where,
An ancient pile of building stands ;*
The Huntingdons and Hattons there
Employ'd the pow'r of Fairy hands.

To raise the ceiling's fretted height,
Each pannel in atchievements clothing,
Rich windows that exclude the light,
And passages that lead to nothing.

Full oft within the spacious walls,
When he had fifty winters o'er him,
My grave Lord-Keeper† led the brawls :
The seal and maces danc'd before him.

His bushy beard and shoe-strings green,
His high-crown'd hat and satin doublet,
Mov'd the stout heart of England's queen,
Tho' Pope and Spaniard could not trouble it.

* The mansion-house at Stoke-Pogeis, then in the possession of Viscountess Cobham. The style of building which we now call Queen Elizabeth's, is here admirably described, both with regard to its beauties and defects; and the third and fourth stanzas delineate the fantastic manners of her time with equal truth and humour. The house formerly belonged to the Earls of Huntingdon and the family of Hatton.

† Sir Christopher Hatton, promoted by Queen Elizabeth for his graceful person and fine dancing.----Brawls were a sort of a figure-dance then in vogue, and probably deemed as elegant as our modern cotillons, or still more modern quadrilles.

What, in the very first beginning?
 Shame of the versifying tribe!
 Your hist'ry whither are you spinning?
 Can you do nothing but describe? 20
 A house there is (and that's enough)
 From whence one fatal morning issues
 A brace of warriors,† not in buff,
 But rustling in their silks and tissues. 24
 The first came cap à-pée from France,
 Her conq'ring destiny fulfilling,
 Whom meaner beauties eye askance,
 And vainly ape her art of killing. 28
 The other Amazon kind Heav'n
 Had arm'd with spirit, wit, and satire;
 But Cobham had the polish giv'n,
 And tipp'd her arrows with good-nature. 32
 To celebrate her eyes, her air—
 Coarse panegyrics would but tease her?
 Melissa is her nom de guerre;
 Alas! who would not wish to please her? 36
 With bonnet blue and capuchine,
 And aprons long, they hid their armour,
 And veil'd their weapons bright and keen
 In pity to the country farmer. 40
 Fame, in the shape of Mr. P—t,‡
 (By this time all the parish know it)
 Had told that thereabouts there lurk'd
 A wicked imp they call a Poet, 44
 Who prowl'd the country far and near,
 Bewitch'd the children of the peasants,
 Dry'd up the cows and lam'd the deer,
 And suck'd the eggs and kill the pheasants. 48

† The reader is already apprized who these ladies were; the two descriptions are prettily contrasted; and nothing can be more happily turned than the compliment to Lady Cobham in the eighth stanza.

‡ I have been told that this gentleman, a neighbour and acquaintance of Mr. Gray's in the country, was much displeased at the liberty here taken with his name, yet surely without any great reason.

My Lady heard their joint petition,
Swore by her coronet and ermine,
She'd issue out her high commission
To rid the manor of such vermine.

52

The heroines undertook the task ;
Thro' lanes unknown, o'er styles they ventur'd,
Rapp'd at the door, nor stay'd to ask,
But bounce into the parlour enter'd.

56

The trembling family they daunt;
They flirt, they sing, they laugh, they tattle,
Rummage his mother, pinch his aunt,
And up stairs in a whirlwind rattle.

60

Each hole and cupboard they explore,
Each creek and cranny of his chamber,
Run hurry scurry round the floor,
And o'er the bed and tester clamber ;

64

Into the drawers and china pry,
Papers and books, a huge imbroglio !
Under a tea-cup he might lie,
Or creas'd like dog's-ears in a folio.

68

On the first marching of the troops,
The Muses, hopeless of his pardon,
Convey'd him underneath their hoops
To a small closet in the garden.

72

So Rumour says ; (who will believe ?)
But that they left the door ajar,
Where safe, and laughing in his sleeve,
He heard the distant din of war.

76

Short was his joy : he little knew
The pow'r of magic was no fable ;
Out of the window wisk they flew,
But left a spell upon the table.

80

The words too eager to unriddle,
The Poet felt a strange disorder ;
Transparent birdline form'd the middle,
And chains invisible the border.

So cunning was the apparatus,
The pow'rful pot-hooks did so move him,
That will-he, nill-he, to the great house
He went as if the devil drove him.

88

Yet on his way (no sign of grace,
For folks in fear are apt to pray)
To Phœbus he preferr'd his case,
And begg'd his aid that dreadful day.

92

The godhead would have back'd his quarrel :
But with a blush, on recollection,
Own'd that his quiver and his laurel
'Gainst four such eyes were no protection.

96

The court was sat, the culprit there ;
Forth from their gloomy mansions creeping,
The Lady Janes and Joans repair,
And from the gallery stand peeping :

100

Such as in silence of the night
Come (sweep) along some winding entry,
(Styack† has often seen the sight)
Or at the chapel-door stand sentry ;

104

In peaked hoods and mantles tarnish'd,
Sour visages enough to scare ye,
High dames of honour once that garnish'd
The drawing-room of fierce Queen Mary !

108

The peers comes : the audience stare,
And doff their hats with due submission ;
She curt'sies, as she takes her chair,
To all the people of condition.

112

The Bard with many an artful fib
Had in imagination fenc'd him,
Disprov'd the arguments of Squib,‡
And all that Grooms § could urge against him.

116

But soon his rhetoric forsook him,
When he the solemn hall had seen ;
A sudden fit of ague shook him ;
He stood as mute as poor Maclean. ||

120

Yet something he was heard to mutter,
“ How in the park, beneath an old-tree,
“ (Without design to hurt the butter,

124

F

† The Housekeeper.

‡ The Steward.

§ Groom of the chamber.

|| A famous highwayman, hanged the week before.

“ He once or twice had penn’d a sonnet;
 “ Yet hop’d that he might save his bacon;
 “ Numbers would give their oaths upon it,
 “ He ne’er was for a conj’rer taken.”

128

The ghostly prudes, with hagged * face,
 Already had condemn’d the sinner:

My Lady rose, and with a grace——

She smil’d, and bid him come to dinner.†

132

“ Jesu-Maria! Madam Bridget,

“ Why, what can the Viscountess mean!”

Cry’d the square hoods, in woeful fidget;

136

“ Decorum’s turn’d to mere civility!

“ Her air and all her manners shew it:

“ Speak to a Commoner and Poet!”

140

[Here 500 stanzas are lost.]

And so God save our noble king,

And guard us from long-winded lubbers,

That to eternity would sing,

And keep my lady from her rubbers.

144

ELEGY.

WRITTEN IN A

COUNTRY CHURCH-YARD.

THE curfew tolls‡ the knell of parting day,

The lowing herd wind slowly o’er the lea,

The ploughman homeward plods his weary way,

And leaves the world to darkness and to me.

Now fades the glimm’ring landscape on the sight,

And all the air a solemn stillness holds,

Save where the beetle wheels his droning flight,

And drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds;

* Hagged, i. e. the face of a witch or hag. The epithet hagard has been sometimes mistaken as conveying the same idea, but it means a very different thing, viz. wild and farouche, and is taken from an unreclaimed hawk called an hagard.

† Here the story finishes; the exclamation of the ghosts, which follows, is characteristic of the Spanish manners of the age when they are supposed to have lived; and the 500 stanzas said to be lost, may be imagined to contain the remainder of their long winded expostulation.

‡ - - - liquilla di lontano

Che pria'l giorno pianger, che si muore. Dante, Purgat. l. 8.

Save that from yonder ivy-mantled tow'r
The moping owl does to the moon complain
Of such as, wand'ring near her secret bow'r,
Molest her ancient solitary reign. 12

Beneath those rugged elms, that yew-tree's shade,
Where heaves the turf in many a mould'ring heap,
Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep. 16

The breezy call of incense-breathing Morn,
The swallow twitt'ring from the straw-built shed,
The cock's shrill clarion, or the echoing horn,
No more shall rouse them from their lowly bed. 20

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
Or busy housewife ply her ev'ning care;
No children run to lisp their fire's return,
Or climb his knees the env'y'd kifs to share. 24

Oft' did the harvest to their sickle yield,
Their furrow oft' the stubborn glebe has broke;
How jocund did they drive their team afield!
How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke! 28

Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
Nor Grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor. 32

The boast of heraldry, the pomp of pow'r,
And all that beauty, all that wealth, e'er gave,
Await alike th' inevitable hour:
The paths of glory lead but to the grave. 36

Nor you, ye Proud! impute to these the fault,
If Mem'ry o'er their tomb no trophies raise,
Where, thro' the long-drawn aisle and fretted vault,
The pealing anthem swells the note of praise. 40

Can storied urn or animated bust
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?
Can Honour's voice provoke the silent dust,
Or Flatt'ry sooth the dull cold ear of death? 44

Perhaps in this neglected spot is laid
Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire;
Hands that the rod of empire might have sway'd,
Or wak'd to ecstasy the living lyre. 48

But knowledge to their eyes her ample page,
Rich with the spoils of Time, did ne'er unroll;
Chill Penury repress'd their noble rage,
And froze the genial current of the soul. 52

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flow'r is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air. 56

Some village-Hampden, that with dauntless breast
The little tyrant of his fields withstood,
Some mute inglorious Milton, here may rest,
Some Cromwell, guiltless of his country's blood. 60

Th' applause of list'ning senates to command,
The threats of pain and ruin to despise,
To scatter plenty o'er a smiling land,
And read their hist'ry in a nation's eyes, 64

Their lot forbad; nor circumscrib'd alone
Their growing virtues, but their crimes confin'd;
Forbad to wade thro' slaughter to a throne,
And shut the gates of mercy on mankind; 68

The struggling pangs of conscious Truth to hide,
To quench the blushes of ingenuous Shame,
Or heap the shrine of Luxury and Pride
With incense kindled at the Muse's flame. 72

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,*
Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;
Along the cool sequester'd vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way. 76

Yet e'en these bones, from insult to protect,
Some frail memorial still erected nigh,
With uncouth rhymes and shapeless sculpture deck'd,
Implores the passing tribute of a sigh. 80

Their name, their years, spelt by th' unletter'd Muse,
The place of fame and elegy supply,
And many a holy text around the strews,
That teach the rustic moralist to die. 84

* This part of the Elegy differs from the first copy. The following stanza was excluded with the other alterations:

Hark! how the sacred calm, that breathes around,
Bids ev'ry fierce tumultuous passion cease,
In still small accents whisp'ring from the ground,
A grateful earnest of eternal peace.

For who to dumb Forgetfulness a prey
This pleasing anxious being e'er resign'd,
Left the warm precincts of the cheerful day,
Nor cast one longing ling'ring look behind? 88

On some fond breast the parting soul relies,
Some pious drops the closing eye requires;
E'en from the tomb the voice of Nature cries,
E'en in our ashes † live their wonted fires. 92

For thee, who, mindful of th' unhonour'd dead,
Dost in those lines their artless tale relate,
If chance, by lonely Contemplation led,
Some kindred spirit shall inquire thy fate, 96

Haply some hoary-headed swain may say,
" Oft' have we seen him, at the peep of dawn,
" Brushing with hasty steps the dews away,
" To meet the sun upon the upland lawn. 100

" There, at the foot of yonder nodding beech,
" That wreathes its old fantastic root so high,
" His listless length at noon-tide would he stretch,
" And pore upon the brook that babbles by. 104

" Hard by yon' wood, now smiling as in scorn,
" Muttering his wayward fancies, he would rove;
" Now drooping, woeful wan! like one forlorn,
" Or craz'd with care, or cross'd in hopeless love. 108

" One morn I miss'd him on the custom'd hill,
" Along the heath, ‡ and near his fav'rite tree;
" Another came; nor yet beside the rill,
" Nor up the lawn, nor at the wood, was he: 112

" The next, with dirges due, in sad array,
" Slow thro' the churchway-path we saw him borne:
" Approach, and read (for thou canst read) the lay
" Grav'd on the stone beneath yon' aged thorn:" § 116

† Ch'i veggio nel pensier, dolce mio fuoco,
Fredda una lingua, et due begli occhi chiusi

Rimaner droppo noi pien di faville. Petrarch. Son. 169.

‡ Mr. Gray forgot, when he displaced, by the preceding stanza, his beautiful description of the evening haunt, the reference to it which he had here left:

Him have we seen the greenwood side along,
While o'er the heath we hy'd, our labour done,
Oft' as the woodlark pip'd her farewell song,
With wistful eyes pursue the setting sun.

§ In the early editions the following lines were added, but the parenthesis was thought too long: There

THE EPITAPH.

HERE rests his head upon the lap of Earth,
A youth to Fortune and to Fame unknown;
Fair Science frown'd not on his humble birth,
And Melancholy mark'd him for her own. 120

Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere;
Heav'n did recompense as largely send :
He gave to mis'ry all he had, a tear; 123
He gain'd from Heav'n ('twas all he wish'd) a friend.

No further seek his merits to disclose,
Or draw his frailties from their dread abode,
(There they alike in trembling hope repose†)
The bosom of his Father and his God. 128

EPITAPH

ON MRS. MARY CLARKE.‡

LO! where this silent marble weeps,
A friend, a wife, a mother, sleeps;
A heart, within whose sacred cell
The peaceful Virtues lov'd to dwell:
Affection warm, and faith sincere, 5
And soft humanity were there.
In agony, in death, resign'd,
She felt the wound she left behind.
Her infant image here below
Sits smiling on a father's woe, 10
Whom what awaits while yet he strays
Along the lonely vale of days?
A pang, to secret sorrow dear,
A sigh, an unavailing tear,
Till time shall ev'ry grief remove
With life, with mem'ry, and with love. 16

There scatter'd oft', the earliest of the year,
By hands unseen, are show'rs of v'lets found;
The redbreast loves to build and warble there,
And little footsteps lightly print the ground.

STANZAS,

SUGGESTED BY A VIEW OF THE SEAT AND RUINS
AT KINGSGATE, IN KENT, 1766.

OLD, and abandon'd by each venal friend,
Here H——d took the pious resolution,
To smuggle a few years, and strive to mend
A broken character and constitution. 4

On this congenial spot he fix'd his choice;
Earl Goodwin trembled for his neighbouring sand:
Here sea-gulls scream, and cormorants rejoice,
And mariners, though shipwreck'd, fear to land. 8

Here reign the blustering north and blasting east,
No tree is heard to whisper, bird to sing;
Yet nature could not furnish out the feast,
Art he invokes new terrors still to bring. 12

Now mouldering fanes and battlements arise,
Turrets and arches nodding to their fall,
Unpeopled monasteries delude our eyes,
And mimic desolation covers all. 16

“ Ah!” said the fighting peer, “ had B——te been true,
Nor G——’s, nor B——d’s promises been vain,
Far other scenes than this had grac’d our view,
And realiz’d the horrors which we feign. 20

“ Purg’d by the sword, and purify’d by fire,
Then had we seen proud London’s hated walls:
Owls should have hooted in St. Peter’s choir,
And foxes stunk and litter’d in St. Paul’s.” 24

TRANSLATION FROM STATIUS.

THIRD in the labours of the disk came on,
With sturdy step and slow, Hippomedon;
Artful and strong he pois’d the well known weight,
By Phlegy as warn’d, and fir’d by Mnestheus’ fate, }
That to avoid and this to emulate, 5
His vig’rous arm he try’d before he flung,
Brac’d all his nerves and ev’ry sinew strung,

Then with a tempest's whirl and wary eye
 Pursu'd his cast, and hurl'd the orb on high ;
 The orb on high, tenacious of its course, 10
 True to the mighty arm that gave it force,
 Far overleaps all bound, and joys to see
 Its ancient lord secure of victory :
 The theatre's green height and woody wall
 Tremble ere it precipitates its fall ; 15
 The pond'rous mass sinks in the cleaving ground,
 While vales and woods and echoing hills rebound.
 As when from Ætna's smoaking summit broke,
 The eyeless Cyclops heav'd the craggy rock,
 Where Ocean frets beneath the dashing oar, 20
 And parting surges round the vessel roar ;
 'Twas there he aim'd the meditated harm,
 And scarce Ulysses 'scap'd his giant arm.
 A tiger's pride the victor bore away,
 With native spots and artful labour gay, 25
 A shining border round the margin roll'd,
 And calm'd the terrors of his claws in gold. 27
Cambridge, May 8th, 1736.

GRAY OF HIMSELF.

TOO poor for a bribe, and too proud to importune,
 He had not the method of making a fortune ;
 Could love and could hate, so was thought something
 No very great wit, he believ'd in a God : [odd ;
 A post or a pension he did not desire,
 But left church and state to Charles Townshend and Squire.

OF THE

*Sudden rising of Monte Nuovo, near Puzzoli, and of the Destruction which attended it.

NEC procul infelix se tollit in æthera Gaurus,
Prospiciens vitreum lugenti vertice pontum :
Tristior ille diu, et veteri defuetus olivâ
Gaurus, pampinæque eheu jam nescius umbræ ;
Horrendi tam sæva premit vicinia montis, 5
Attonitumque urget latus, exuritque ferentem.
Nam fama est olim, mediâ dum rura filebant
Nocte, Deo victa, et molli perfusa quiete,
Infremuisse æquor ponti auditamque per omnes
Latè tellurem surdùm immugire cavernas : 10
Quo sonitu nemora alta tremunt ; tremit excita tuto
Parthenopæa sinu, flammantisque ora Vesuvi.
At subito se aperire solum, vastosque recessus
Tandere sub pedibus, nigrâque voragine fauces ;
Pum piceas cinerum glomerare sub æthere nubes 15
Vorticibus rapidis, ardentique imbre procellam.
Præcipites fugere feræ, perque avia longè
Sylvarum fugit pastor, juga per deserta,
Ah, misert' increpitans sæpè altâ voce per umbram
Nequicquam natos, creditque audire sequentes. 20
Atque ille excelsa rupis de vertice solus

* See Sandy's Travels, B. iv. p. 275---278.

Respectans notasque domos, et dulcia regna,
Nil usquam videt infelix præter mare tristi
Lumine percussum, et pallentes sulphure campos,
Fumumque, flammæque, rotataque turbine faxa. 25

Quin ubi detonuit fragor, et lux reddita cœlo;

Mæstos confluere agricolas, passuque videres

Tandem iterum timido deserta requirere taeta:

Sperantes, si forte oculis si forte darentur

Uxorum cineres, miserorum veossa parentum 30

(Tenuia, sed tanti saltem solatia luctus)

Unâ colligere et justâ componere in urnâ.

Uxorum nusquam cineres, nunquam ossa parentum

(Spem miseram!) assuetosve Lares, Taurura videbunt.

Quippe ubi planities campi diffusa jacebat; 35

Mons novus: ille supercilium, frontemque favillâ

Incanum ostentans, ambustis cautibus, æquor

Subiectum, stragemque suam, mæsta arva, minaci

Despicit imperio, soloque in littore regnat.

Hinc infame loci nomen, multosque per annos 40

Immemor antiquæ laudis, nescire labores

Vomeris, et nullo tellus revirescere cultu.

Non avium colles, non carmine matutino

Pastorum resonare; adeò undique dirus habebat

Informes latè horror agros saltuque vacantes. 45

Sæpius et longè detorquens navita proram

Monstrabat digito littus, sævæque revolvens

Funera narrabat noctis, veteremque ruinam.

Montis adhuc facies manet hirta atque aspera faxis:

Sed furor extinctus jamdudum, et flamma quievit, 50

Quæ nascenti aderat; seu fortè bituminis atri

Defluxere olîm rivi, atque effœta lacuna

Pabula sufficere ardori, viresque recusat;

Siye in visceribus meditans incendia jam nunc

(Horrendum) arcanis glomerat genti esse futuræ 55

Exitio, sparsos tacitusque recolligit ignes.

Raro per clivos haud secius ordine vidi

Canescentem oleam: longum post tempus amicti

Vite virent tumulti; patriamque revisere gaudens

Bacchus in assuetis tenerum caput exerit arvis

Vix tandem, infidoque audent se credere cœlo. 61

Frigoribus juga, nec nimum spirantibus auris!

Alma quibus Tusci Pallas decus Apennini

Non ego vos posthac Arni de valle videbo

Porticibus circum, & candenti cincta coronâ

Villarum longè nitido consurgere dorso,

Antiquamve Ædem, et veteres præferre Cupressus

IMITATION

OF AN

Italian Sonnet of Signor Abbate Buondelmonte.

SPESSE Amor sotto la forma
D'amistà ride, e s'asconde:

Poi si mischia, e si confonde

Con lo sdegno, e col rancor.

In Pietade ei si transforma;

Par trastullo, e par dispetto:

Mà hel suo diverso aspetto

Sempr'egi, è l'istesso Amor.

Lusit amicitiae interdum velatus amictu,

Et benè compositâ veste fefellit Amor.

Mox iræ assumsit cultus, faciemque minantem,

Inque odium versus, versus et in lacrymas:

Ludentem fuge, nec lacrymanti, aut crede furenti;

Idem est dissimili semper in ore Deus.
